Introduction and instructions for the Beginners' Course for Algilez

(Pages 4 & 5 explain how to activate the sound from the loudspeaker icons)

- This is a short course for beginners in Algilez. A classroom-based course, with a teacher and other students is better, but this course is designed for people working individually.
- There are 20 lessons, each taking about 1 ½ hours. When you have completed the course you can then take a test and check your answers.
- The course covers listening, speaking, reading & writing and includes all of the main grammatical features of Algilez and a lot of useful vocabulary.

Advice on learning

- Don't just look at the slides and listen to the recordings. Learning requires action!
- Practise writing what you see on the slides and repeating out loud what you hear on the recordings.
- Algilez words will also be used again in later lessons, so get used to writing down the words and the English translation. Get yourself a notebook and use it to make an alphabetical list.
- Colour coding - questions answers vocabulary

Technical Details - Important!

- If you are using a PC, Adobe PDF reader (XI) will display the slides and enable the audio to be played.
- In order to play the sound, click on the 'Enable Editing', button on the top right of Adobe Reader, then 'OK'.
- When you click on one of the loudspeaker buttons, you may get a yellow bar security warning. Don't worry! This is simply because the PDF files have been modified by adding audio. Click on 'Options', 'Trust this document.' and the audio files will play when you click on them. Save the file using the same filename.

Technical Details - Important!

- On mobile devices, Adobe reader does not play the audio embedded in PDF files.
- I have found that ezPDF player from Unidocs works, which is available on Google Store. It costs £2-£3.
- Once downloaded and installed on your mobile device, use ezPDF player to open the Algilez lessons.
- To close any unnecessary buttons on the ezPDF screen, click the menu button, middle right side and click Navigation.
